Playing The Disciple

Brooding, obsessed, vengeful, tragic. The Disciple believes that their purpose in life is to help summon a powerful being from beyond this realm, potentially ushering in the end of the world. They are hiding in the corner, constantly giving away more and more of their power to a force beyond comprehension.

They might be callous and unsociable (Cold 2 & Dark 1), or weird and unnerving (Dark 2 & Volatile 1). Their Hot stat is always low, because they have systematically shut themself off from spontaneous human connection. They are attached to being an outsider.

The Disciple has been radicalized onto a morbid path, one with the potential to consume and destroy them. There is allegory here about how violent ideologies get rehearsed over and over again, online and in teenage bedrooms, and if no one intervenes they eventually get enacted. The sheer number of Strings required to summon the Wicked Master tells a story about hundreds of moments when there was an opportunity to turn back, to intervene, or to start questioning again. Is it too late for this harbinger of doom?

The Disciple has a Heart Move (rather than a Sex Move), built around the power of meaningful human connections in helping someone to de-radicalize and move toward healing.

MC, let the Wicked Master’s Strings accumulate, only spending them at especially significant moments. Let the tether get stronger and stronger over time. Note that the Wicked Master can gain Strings on anyone (contributing to the End of the World total), but that they should almost always stem from The Disciple’s actions, influence, and associates.

The Disciple

The world will end. You know the name of the awesome and terrible force that will end it. It’s the name you whisper under your breath every day.

It’s the name you worship.
